The Farmyard Adventure

One warm summer morning, Mark and his sister Clara visited their grandpa's farm. The farm was large, with many animals and big, open fields. Mark and Clara loved exploring the farmyard.

First, they went to the barn to see the horses. The horses were tall and strong. Clara fed them carrots while Mark brushed their shiny coats. Next, they walked to the orchard, where they picked fresh apples. The orchard was full of ripe, red apples hanging from the trees.

After that, they visited the garden. Grandpa was there, watering the plants. "Look at these corn plants," he said. "They will be ready to harvest soon." Mark and Clara helped pull some weeds from the garden.

Suddenly, they heard a loud noise coming from the yard. It was a large turkey strutting around and making funny sounds. Mark and Clara laughed and watched the turkey until it wandered off.

At the end of the day, Grandpa took Mark and Clara to the river at the edge of the farm. They skipped stones on the water and watched the sun set. It was a perfect end to their farmyard adventure.
