

ANSWERS

1. a statement that is backed up with objective evidence
2. It presents a particular point of view and bases that view on objective evidence
3. An assertion is not based on evidence that can reasonably be considered objective,
4. A statement of fact does not have a point of view, but a statement of fact can be used as evidence to support an argument.
5. An overarching argument is the main argument. Contributing arguments support the main argument. Each must be supported with evidence.