Dino-Kite Festival

In a small town, dinosaurs celebrated the annual kite festival. Each dinosaur had to knot their own kite. T-Rex, despite his short arms, managed to create a magnificent kite.

His friend, Stego, brought a knapsack full of colorful ribbons. They all gathered at the knoll where the wind was perfect for flying kites. Triceratops, with her keen sense of weather, knew it was the best day for the festival.

As the kites soared, everyone felt a sense of joy and excitement. Even the youngest dinos participated, kneeling on the grass to launch their kites. By the end of the day, the sky was a beautiful mosaic of colors and shapes.
