

ANSWERS

The invasion started out well, but as things started to go wrong, Napoleon ignored them until it was too late to turn back. His army was punished by the harsh Russian winter and from Russia's scorched-earth tactics and guerrilla warfare. His overconfidence (hubris) was ultimately his downfall.