Easter on Mars: A Red Planet Celebration

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. (Possible answer) Celebrating holidays like Easter on Mars would be different because of the unique Martian landscape and environment. For example, the Easter Egg Hunt would involve navigating through Martian terrain, and the star-gazing session would provide a different view of the night sky compared to Earth.
2. (Possible answer) The colonists cherished their Earthly traditions because it helped them stay connected to their home planet and provided a sense of comfort and familiarity in the midst of the challenges of living on Mars. Celebrating these traditions was a way to maintain a sense of identity and community.
3. (Possible answer) The colonists likely enjoyed the Martian Egg Hunt the most because it was a fun adventure that allowed them to explore their unique environment while celebrating a traditional holiday. It combined the excitement of a treasure hunt with the thrill of discovering hidden Mars Egg containers.
4. (Possible answer) The view of Earth from Mars might evoke feelings of nostalgia and longing among the colonists. Seeing their home planet in the distance could remind them of their origins and the people they left behind on Earth, making the Easter celebration on Mars both joyful and bittersweet.
