Famous Figures and Their Contributions to Drug Prevention

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Nancy Reagan's "Just Say No" campaign was significant because it aimed to prevent drug abuse among young people by promoting the message that saying "no" to drugs is a powerful decision. It used educational programs and public awareness to encourage responsible choices and resistance to peer pressure.
2. The D.A.R.E. program is a school-based initiative that educates students about the dangers of drugs and teaches them life skills to resist peer pressure. It impacts students by providing them with knowledge and strategies to make responsible choices and avoid drug abuse.
3. Betty Ford made significant contributions to addiction recovery and treatment by founding the Betty Ford Center, an addiction treatment facility that has helped countless individuals and families overcome addiction. Her dedication and advocacy have provided hope and healing for many.
4. Darrell Scott's personal tragedy, the loss of his daughter Rachel in the Columbine High School shooting, led to the creation of Rachel's Challenge. This organization promotes drug prevention among students by inspiring kindness, empathy, and positive change. It encourages students to make responsible choices and create a safer and more inclusive school environment.
