

Name _____

The Space Explorer's Discovery

In a distant galaxy, a young space explorer named Harper was on a mission to find new planets. Harper was known as a skilled navigator, able to chart a course through the stars with ease. Her spaceship, the Starfinder, was equipped with the latest technology.

One day, while looking at the radar, Harper noticed an unusual signal coming from a nearby planet. She decided to investigate and set the Starfinder on a new course. As she approached the planet, she saw it was covered in shimmering crystals.

Harper landed the spaceship and stepped onto the surface of the planet. The ground was covered in glittering rocks that sparkled under the sun. Using her scanner, Harper discovered that the crystals were a new type of mineral, unlike anything found on Earth.

While exploring, Harper met an alien named Zander. Zander was a friendly explorer who loved to discover new things just like Harper. Together, they searched the planet for more treasures. They found a river with water clearer than any Harper had ever seen.

Harper and Zander decided to collect samples of the crystals and the water. They knew these discoveries would be important for scientists back on Earth. After filling their containers, they returned to the Starfinder, excited to share their findings.

As Harper waved goodbye to Zander, she promised to return. She felt happy to have made a new friend and found such amazing treasures. Harper knew that being a space explorer meant discovering not just new places, but also new friends.