The Tale of the Knight and the Night

Once upon a time, in a faraway land, there was a brave knight named Sir Star. Sir Star loved to ride his horse at night when the stars were shining bright.

One night, as Sir Star rode through the forest, he saw a light. It was a tiny firefly glowing in the dark. "Hello, little light!" said Sir Star. "Why are you out at night?"

The firefly buzzed, "I am here to light up the night! Do you like the night, Sir Star?"

"Yes, I love the night," said Sir Star. "The night is calm and quiet, and I can see the stars."

As they talked, they heard a loud noise. It was a knight riding fast through the forest. "Who goes there?" called out Sir Star.

"It's me, Sir Knight," said another brave knight named Sir Bright. "I am looking for a lost kitten. Have you seen it?"

"No, I have not seen a kitten, but I will help you find it," said Sir Star.

Together, Sir Star and Sir Bright searched the forest. Finally, under a tree, they found the little kitten curled up, fast asleep.

"Thank you, Sir Star," said Sir Bright. "You are a good knight and a great friend."

Sir Star smiled. "And you are a good knight too, Sir Bright. Let's take the kitten home and enjoy the rest of the night."

They took the kitten back to the castle, and everyone was happy. Sir Star and Sir Bright had made a new friend and shared a special night under the stars.
