The Menorah Treasure Hunt

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. The Goldstein family's ancestors likely felt a sense of pride in passing on their traditions and heritage to future generations. They probably wanted to ensure that their family bonds remained strong and that their customs continued to be celebrated.
2. The final clue being located at the family's front door may symbolize the importance of their home and family traditions. It serves as a reminder that their family's heart and identity are centered around their home and the celebration of Hanukkah.
3. The menorah treasure hunt strengthened the Goldstein family's connection to their heritage and traditions by involving them in a meaningful adventure that linked their past to the present. It emphasized the importance of family, history, and the continuity of their customs.
4. Another creative way the Goldstein family could have found their missing menorah could be by interviewing their neighbors and asking if anyone had seen anything unusual on the night it went missing. This could have led them to a witness who had valuable information.
