DIRECTIONS: Circle the errors in the passage.

The clownfish is an orange and white fish that lives in corul reefs. There, clownfish has a special relationship with an underwater plants called anemones. The anemone ataches itself to a rock or coral. It has many poisonous tentacles to protect itself from predators The clownfish doesn't get hurt because its covered with a layer of mucus which protects it. The aneone provides shelter for the clownfish, and the clownfish eats parasites that would otherwise make the anemone sick.
