

Name _____

The Golden Years Friendship Club

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. The activities and outings of the Golden Years Friendship Club enriched the retirees' lives by providing opportunities for socialization, learning new skills, staying active, and creating lasting memories. They made their golden years more enjoyable by fostering a sense of community and friendship.
2. When the club rallied around Martha during her health scare, the members likely felt a deep sense of support, care, and solidarity. They realized the importance of being there for one another in times of need, strengthening their bond as friends.
3. Retirees could enjoy activities like gardening, book clubs, volunteering, art classes, or learning new languages to stay active and engaged in their communities.
4. Forming a friendship club like the one in the story can be beneficial for retirees because it provides social interaction, emotional support, opportunities for personal growth, and a sense of belonging, which can enhance their overall well-being and quality of life during their retirement years.

