The Lunchroom Rebellion

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. The students were fed up with the cafeteria food because it was bland and unappetizing, making their daily lunches unenjoyable.
2. Principal Anderson played a key role in resolving the issue by listening to the students' complaints, involving the school community in a cooking competition, and implementing the winning recipes in the cafeteria.
3. The cooking competition involved the entire school community as students, parents, and teachers teamed up to cook and submit recipes for a chance to improve the cafeteria food.
4. The story teaches us that when we speak up for what we believe in and work together, we can bring about positive changes in our surroundings, even if it means challenging the status quo.
