

Name _____

Martin's Interstellar Message

In a distant galaxy, on a planet called Lumoria, there was a civilization of beings known as Lumorians. These Lumorians were divided into two groups, the Blue Lumorians and the Green Lumorians. For ages, they had been discriminating against each other based on their skin color, despite being similar in every other way.

One day, an extraordinary event occurred. A portal from another dimension opened, and through it stepped a man named Martin Luther King Jr. He carried with him the message of equality and justice that had inspired Earth for generations.

Martin was amazed by the Lumorian's similarities to Earth's past struggles for civil rights. He decided to share his wisdom and experience with them. Using a universal translation device, he addressed the Lumorian leaders from both sides.

"I have a dream," Martin began, "that one day, Blue Lumorians and Green Lumorians will sit down together at the same table, united by the common bond of their Lumorian identity."

The Lumorians listened intently as Martin shared stories of Earth's civil rights movements and the power of peaceful protests. He explained how love and understanding could bridge the divide between different groups.

Inspired by Martin's words, Lumorian children of both colors started playing together. Lumorian adults began working side by side, and discrimination started to fade away. The Lumorians realized that they were stronger together, just as Martin had taught.

Martin's message spread throughout Lumoria, and people from all walks of life joined the cause. They organized peaceful marches and rallies to demand equal rights for everyone, regardless of their skin color.

One day, a Lumorian named Lina, who had once been discriminated against because she was Green, became the leader of Lumoria's united Lumorian society. She declared that discrimination would never be tolerated again.

As the Lumorians looked to the stars, they felt grateful to Martin Luther King Jr. for bringing them a message of hope and unity. They knew that they had a long journey ahead, but with love and understanding, they would overcome their differences and create a better future for their world.