The Changing Crowd

Short Answer Key

1. The crowd cheers for Caesar after his victory, even though they used to cheer for Pompey. This shows they change their loyalties quickly.
2. Brutus tells the people that Caesar wanted to be king and would have taken away their freedom.
3. Antony reads Caesar's will, which promises land and money to the people, making them feel that Caesar cared for them.
4. The Roman people become angry, riot, and turn against Brutus and the other senators.
5. The crowd first supports Brutus, then Antony, showing that public opinion can be easily swayed by powerful speeches.
