Love and Choices

Short Answer Key

1. Meg's marriage teaches that love and happiness are more important than wealth.
2. Jo's decision challenges expectations because women were often expected to marry even if they did not truly love their partner.
3. Professor Bhaer was right for Jo because he respected her dreams and encouraged her writing.
4. Amy values financial stability more than Meg, but she also wants love in her marriage.
5. The different marriages show that love and happiness come in many forms, and each person must choose their own path.
