

Name _____

Night of the Living Spirits

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. The children's curiosity led them to explore an old, overgrown path in the woods. They decided to enter the cemetery because their curiosity overcame their fear of the haunted rumors. They wanted to see for themselves what was hidden in the forest.
2. The atmosphere in the hidden cemetery was eerie yet enchanting, with ancient tombstones, marigold flowers, and glowing candles. When the spirits came alive, they danced and celebrated, sharing stories of their lives from centuries past. The scene was filled with a sense of joy, connection, and a touch of magic.
3. The friendship between the children and the spirits was significant because it bridged the gap between the living and the departed. It showed that connections could be made across different realms, and it enriched the lives of both the living and the spirits. The children gained wisdom and cultural insights, while the spirits experienced the joy of making new friends in the living world.
4. The story teaches us that Halloween night is a time when magic and unexpected connections can occur. It shows that the holiday is not just about scares but also about forming bonds and gaining new experiences. The children's adventure changed their perspective on Halloween by showing them that it could be a night of friendship, learning, and celebration beyond traditional trick-or-treating.
