_____ 1. I remember the last time I saw George. He was pedaling away from me on his bike, with his backpack on his bag and his ponytail flying out behind him like a flag.

_____ 2. Mary bit the end of her pencil. She had known the answer to this question yesterday, she was sure of it. She began to grow more and more anxious. Why did things fly out of her had as soon as she heard the word, "test?"

_____ 3. The children stomped up the stairs. They slid back down on the bannisters. Their giggles could be heard from anywhere in the house. In the kitchen, their mother, preparing their snack, smiled to hear them.

_____ 4. All day cars crossed the intersection at the light. They stopped. They started. Pedestrians stepped into crosswalks. There were occasional sirens. Shouts. The whooshing sound of air brakes. The backfire of someone's exhaust. It was a busy street on an ordinary day in springtime.
