

Running

DIRECTIONS: Read the story. Put the events of the story in the correct order.

Michael loved to run. One day, he decided he was going to run everywhere that he went that day. He ran all the way to school. At lunch time he ran to the cafeteria – he got into trouble for that. He got into trouble for running from the cafeteria to the playground too. On the playground he ran around in circles until the bell rang. Then he ran back to class, where he got scolded for running in the halls. After school, while his neighbors were getting on the bus, Michael ran all the way home. He ran into his house and up the stairs and into his bedroom. Then he collapsed on this bed.

“What’s the matter with you?” his brother asked, looking in at Michael from the hallway.

“I ran out of energy,” Michael told him.

_____ Michael ran to school.

_____ Michael ran on the playground.

_____ Michael ran home from school.

_____ Michael decided to run everywhere he went.

_____ Michael got in trouble for running to the cafeteria.

_____ Michael got scolded for running in the halls.