

Name _____

Mouse Mayhem

Short Answer Key

1. The school setting changes the story by introducing things like lunchboxes, classrooms, and playgrounds, which make the adventure different from one at home.
2. The mouse takes charge by jumping into activities like building with blocks and teaching a lesson instead of waiting to be told what to do.
3. All of Laura Numeroff's books feel connected because they follow the same chain-reaction pattern and feature animals who create funny situations.
4. The school setting makes this book unique because kids can relate to the activities, and the mouse's excitement makes a normal school day feel extra silly.
5. The book keeps readers entertained by showing how one small action—like bringing a mouse to school—leads to a chain of unexpected events.
