Different Paths

Short Answer Key

1. Meg sometimes wished for fancy things because she admired wealth and beauty, but she realized that love and family mattered more.
2. Jo wanted to be a writer and live independently, which was unusual for women at the time because they were expected to marry.
3. Beth's gentle and kind nature made her special because she found joy in caring for others and didn't seek attention.
4. When she was younger, Amy cared about wealth and status, but she later learned that success comes from passion and effort.
5. The March sisters teach us that there are many ways to be strong and that every woman can choose her own path.
