

Name _____

Language of Friendship

Short Answer Key

1. Mia and Luca communicated through drawings and actions. Luca understood Mia's drawing of an apple tree and led the group to a grove of apple trees.
2. The children expressed their thoughts and desires without using words by pointing, miming, and using simple drawings. They enjoyed activities like soccer, origami, Moroccan tea traditions, and making s'mores by the campfire.
3. The children learned that friendship can transcend language barriers. They realized that they could connect, understand, and have fun with each other without speaking the same language.
4. After their adventure on the island, the children felt that their friendship was even stronger than before because they had shared a unique experience and learned that kindness, gestures, and actions could communicate love and laughter.
5. The children showed that love and laughter are universal by connecting and having fun with each other through gestures, drawings, and actions, despite not sharing a common language.

