

Name _____

Laughing with Larry: The Groundhog Comedy Show

Larry the groundhog had always been a bit different from his burrow-mates. While other groundhogs loved digging tunnels and munching on carrots, Larry had a unique passion—he wanted to be a stand-up comedian.

Larry's burrow was filled with joke books and funny props. He would spend hours practicing his jokes in front of a small mirror. His friends didn't understand his fascination with making others laugh, but Larry was determined to pursue his dream.

One sunny Groundhog Day, Larry had an idea that would change everything. He decided to host a comedy show right there in his burrow. He invited all the animals from the nearby woods to attend. The news spread quickly, and soon a crowd of animals gathered around Larry's burrow entrance.

As Larry stepped onto a small stage he had built, his heart raced. He looked at the eager faces of the animals who had come to watch him perform. Taking a deep breath, he began his first joke.

"Why did the squirrel bring a ladder to the tree? Because it wanted to go nuts!"

The audience burst into laughter, and Larry's confidence grew. He continued with more jokes, funny stories, and even some animal impersonations. His audience couldn't stop laughing, and Larry was overjoyed.

During his performance, Larry also shared stories about his fellow groundhogs and their quirky burrow habits. The audience found it hilarious to hear about groundhogs' love for napping, their obsession with carrots, and their occasional tunneling mishaps.

As Larry concluded his comedy show, the animals cheered and applauded. They had never had so much fun on Groundhog Day! Larry had not only made them laugh but also brought the community together.

From that day on, Larry's comedy show became a beloved Groundhog Day tradition. Every year, animals from all around would gather to laugh with Larry and celebrate the joy of humor. Larry had found his calling and his place in the hearts of the forest's residents.

And so, Groundhog Day in the woods became more than just a day for predicting the weather; it became a day for laughter and happiness, thanks to Larry, the stand-up comedian groundhog.

