From Asia to Adventureland: A Family's Journey

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Answers may vary. Example response: One funny moment was when Polly mimicked the sound of a barking dog on the plane. It made everyone around us laugh, and it made the long flight much more enjoyable.
2. Learning a new language can be challenging because it may be hard to communicate with others initially. Adapting to different customs can be challenging because it requires understanding and respecting a new way of life, which may be different from what the family is used to.
3. Answers may vary. Example response: I would advise them to be patient and open-minded. Learning about the new culture, making new friends, and taking small steps to adapt gradually can make the transition smoother.
4. Polly's mimicking of their old city brought back familiar sounds and memories, providing a sense of comfort and connection to their previous home. It helped the Lees cope with homesickness by reminding them of the place they missed.
