A Race Against the Rain

Liam and his sister, Chloe, were at the park flying their brand-new kite. The kite soared high, dancing in the wind like a colorful bird. "This is the best kite ever!" Liam cheered.

But suddenly, dark clouds rolled in, and a few drops of rain began to fall. "Uh-oh," said Chloe, looking up. "We'd better get home before the storm starts!"

They reeled in the kite as fast as they could and grabbed their picnic blanket. "Quick, Liam! Run!" Chloe shouted as the drops turned into a drizzle. They raced through the park, laughing as the wind pushed them forward. Just as they reached their porch, the rain poured down in big, fat drops.

"Phew! We made it!" Liam said, holding up the dry kite. "Next time, we'll check the weather first!" Chloe giggled. "Good idea!"
