Twisted Choices

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Some may say he does feel guilty because he breaks down and confesses, while others may argue that he is more afraid of being caught than truly remorseful.
2. The story shows that even when someone thinks they have escaped punishment, their own guilt can haunt them and force them to face the truth.
3. Some might argue that he was mad and not responsible, while others may say that he planned the crime carefully and knew exactly what he was doing.
4. Answers will vary, but students may suggest talking to someone about his fears, seeking help, or finding a different way to handle his discomfort.
