

Name _____

Comparing Adventures

Short Answer Key

1. An example is when Odysseus's weeping is compared to a woman crying for her fallen husband.
2. Personification makes nature seem more alive by giving it human qualities, like calling the dawn "rosy-fingered."
3. Imagery makes Scylla's attack more frightening and helps the reader picture the danger.
4. It helps readers feel Odysseus's sadness by comparing it to a deep human loss.
5. Literary devices make the story more exciting and easier to imagine, making the adventure feel real.

