Power Struggles

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Some may argue the senators were right because they wanted to protect Rome, while others may say killing Caesar led to more chaos.
2. Power struggles in the play are similar to modern politics, where leaders and groups argue about government control.
3. People may believe speeches because they are emotional, persuasive, or make promises that seem appealing.
4. The play teaches that leaders should put their people first and not let personal ambition take over.
