The Kids Who Brought Back Valentine's Day

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. The children believed in the magic of Valentine's Day and couldn't bear to see their town so devoid of love and joy. They were motivated by their love for the holiday and their desire to share that love with their community.
2. The children's actions reminded the adults of the holiday's significance and brought love and joy back to the town. Their efforts led to the reinstatement of Valentine's Day as an official town holiday and brought people together to celebrate love and friendship.
3. The story emphasizes that children have the power to make a positive impact by taking initiative and spreading love and kindness. It shows that even small actions can lead to meaningful change and remind adults of important values.
