

Name _____

The Globetrotting American Flag

The American flag, Old Glory, had always been a symbol of unity and freedom in the United States. But one day, it decided to embark on a grand adventure around the world, eager to learn about other cultures and spread goodwill. With the help of a gentle breeze, it lifted off its flagpole and began its journey.

First, Old Glory traveled to China, where it learned about the rich history of the Great Wall and the art of making delicate porcelain. It met friendly locals who taught it the art of calligraphy and shared delicious dumplings. As it waved proudly in the Chinese sky, it felt a sense of unity with the people of China.

Next, the flag ventured to India, where it marveled at the majestic Taj Mahal and the vibrant colors of the Holi festival. It met children who taught it traditional dances and how to cook spicy curries. Old Glory felt a deep connection with the Indian culture and its warm-hearted people.

From there, it journeyed to Egypt, where it stood in awe of the ancient pyramids and learned about the mysteries of hieroglyphics. It even got to ride a camel across the vast desert. The Egyptian people welcomed the flag with open arms, and Old Glory realized that kindness was a universal language.

Continuing its tour, the flag visited France, where it admired the Eiffel Tower and savored croissants. It learned about the importance of art and creativity from the local painters and musicians. Old Glory felt inspired by the beauty of Paris and the French way of life.

Afterward, it traveled to Brazil, where it danced to the rhythms of samba during the colorful Carnival. It explored the Amazon rainforest and saw exotic wildlife. The Brazilian people's warmth and hospitality left a lasting impression on Old Glory.

Throughout its journey, the flag experienced diverse cultures, tasted delicious foods, and made friends from all over the world. It had learned that despite differences in language and customs, people everywhere shared a common desire for peace and understanding.

As the flag returned to the United States, it carried with it the lessons and memories of its incredible journey. It waved proudly, not just as a symbol of America, but as a symbol of unity and goodwill that transcended borders.

