

Name _____

The Enchanted Attic Adventure

One sunny summer day, Sarah and Jake visited their grandma's house. They loved spending time with her because she always had the most exciting stories to tell. This time, however, Grandma had a surprise for them that would lead to an adventure they would never forget.

After a delicious lunch of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, Grandma led them up a creaky staircase to the attic. "I think you two might find something interesting up here," she said with a mysterious twinkle in her eye.

The attic was filled with old trunks, dusty books, and forgotten treasures. Sarah and Jake began to explore, uncovering memories from Grandma's past. Then, in the corner, they stumbled upon a box that seemed to shimmer with a faint, magical glow.

Curiosity got the better of them, and they carefully opened the box. Inside, they found five enchanted objects: a silver key, a feathered quill, a crystal ball, a golden locket, and a small, glowing lantern.

Suddenly, the objects started to float in the air and circled around the children. Before they knew it, the key turned into a magical map, the quill transformed into a talking parrot, the crystal ball revealed glimpses of distant lands, the locket showed a picture of their grandma as a young girl, and the lantern emitted a warm, comforting light.

The magical objects told them that they were chosen to embark on an adventure to solve a centuries-old mystery. With the help of the enchanted items and their grandma's guidance, they would need to find the lost city of Atlantis.