Broken Bonds

In the realm of friendship, so close and true,
A tale of love and betrayal, I share with you,
Two hearts entwined, a bond so deep,
Yet secrets kept, in shadows they'd creep.
We laughed, we cried, through thick and thin,
Inseparable souls, through every win,
But a whisper, a rumor, a truth untold,
Unraveled the story of trust and friendship old.
A choice was made, a secret revealed,
The pain of betrayal, like an open field,
The intersection of love and deceit,
A friendship shattered, no longer complete.
Through tears and anger, we faced the test,
Could we forgive and forget the rest?
Or was the bond forever broken and lost,
In the tangled web of betrayal's cost?
As time moved on, wounds began to heal,
A chance for redemption, a friendship's appeal,
In the end, we chose love over spite,
To rebuild what was broken, in the healing light.
But scars remained, a reminder still,
Of the intersection where love and betrayal met,
A lesson learned, a story to tell,
Of the complexities of friendship, we know so well.
