The Celebrity Surprise

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Max Stardom's behavior during the day revealed that he was a self-absorbed and eccentric individual who cared more about appearances and gadgets than genuine connections. Frank was initially surprised because he had admired Max as a celebrity and expected him to be different in person.
2. Frank's experience spending a day with Max Stardom differed significantly from his expectations. He had admired Max as a celebrity, but the day revealed Max's true personality as an eccentric and pretentious individual. This experience likely affected Frank's admiration for the celebrity, causing it to diminish.
3. Max Stardom's eccentric and pretentious behavior might have been driven by a desire to maintain his image as a celebrity. He may have felt the need to constantly stand out and impress others, even at the expense of genuine connections.
4. From his day with Max Stardom, Frank likely learned that celebrities may not always live up to the idealized image created by their fame. He may have realized the importance of authenticity and genuine connections in his interactions with others, regardless of their status.
