

Name _____

Justice and Redemption: Chapters 29-31 of 'To Kill a Mockingbird'

In the final chapters of Harper Lee's novel, "To Kill a Mockingbird," we witness the culmination of events that have been building throughout the story. As the Finch family confronts danger and prejudice head-on, the town of Maycomb grapples with the consequences of its actions.

Chapter 29: The Confrontation

Atticus, Jem, and Scout head to the Maycomb County courthouse to retrieve some items left there. As they approach the dark, empty building, they are suddenly confronted by Bob Ewell, seeking revenge for the trial's outcome. In the ensuing struggle, Boo Radley intervenes to save the children from harm.

Chapter 30: Unveiling Boo Radley

After the confrontation with Bob Ewell, Atticus calls Sheriff Heck Tate to the scene. It becomes clear that Boo Radley saved Jem and Scout, but Tate and Atticus decide not to make Boo the center of unwanted attention. They agree to tell the townsfolk that Bob Ewell fell on his knife.

Chapter 31: Saying Goodbye to Boo

Scout finally meets Boo Radley, the reclusive neighbor whom she had only known through rumors and stories. She realizes that he is kind and gentle. Boo's quiet presence and his act of saving Jem and Scout represent a powerful moment of redemption and understanding.