Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Crocodiles can survive in many parts of the world because they can live in both freshwater and saltwater and can go long periods without food.
2. A crocodile's body helps it hunt with strong jaws, sharp teeth, and the ability to stay hidden in water.
3. Eating large meals helps crocodiles survive in places where food is not always available.
4. (Example) As a young crocodile, I would hide near the water's edge and wait for small fish or frogs to come close before snapping them up with my sharp teeth.
