

Name _____

Divorce and Co-Parenting

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Answers may vary, but a possible response is that Karen and Mark made the right decision because it showed their children that they still cared deeply for them and were willing to put aside their differences for their sake.
2. Karen and Mark's personal growth allowed them to become better individuals and, as a result, better co-parents. Personal growth is important in co-parenting because it helps divorced parents handle their emotions, communicate effectively, and prioritize their children's well-being.
3. Answers may vary, but a possible response is that the story conveys the message that divorced parents face challenges but can overcome them through effective communication, personal growth, and prioritizing their children's well-being.
4. Karen and Mark's commitment to co-parenting created a stable and loving environment for Lily and Max, showing them that their parents still cared deeply for them despite the divorce. It allowed the children to feel secure and loved.

