

Name _____

Unraveling Minds: A Day in the Life of an Educational Psychologist

Short Answer Key

1. The primary responsibility of an Educational Psychologist is to apply principles of psychology to understand and improve student learning and well-being.
2. One important skill that Educational Psychologists need to have is assessment skills.
3. An Educational Psychologist might conduct counseling sessions with students in the afternoon.
4. Assessment skills are important for Educational Psychologists because they use assessments to identify students' needs and challenges.
5. Educational Psychologists support students with special needs by collaborating with educators and parents to create personalized education plans and interventions.

