Remorseful Reflections: An Elegy for Regret

Regret, a weight upon my soul,

A past mistake, I can't control.

I wish to turn back time's cruel hand,

To rewrite the script, to take a stand.

In the moments when I erred,

I wish I had been more prepared.

A choice I made, a path I took,

Regretful actions, a heavy book.

I've learned my lesson, paid the price,

Regret lingers, like cold as ice.

But in this elegy, I find release,

A chance to heal, to find my peace.

I'll carry the weight of my mistake,

But in forgiveness, I'll find a stake.

To build anew, to right my wrongs,

In this elegy, my heart belongs.
