The Enigmatic Beasts

In a world where animals spoke in riddles, their voices in a maze,

Each creature embodied a different aspect of life's wondrous ways.

The wise old owl perched on a branch, asked, "What am I, my friend?"

In darkness, I seek wisdom's light, my riddles have no end."

A sly and cunning fox, with gleaming eyes of gold,

Spoke in riddles of cleverness, a tale forever told.

The gentle lamb in meadows green, whispered, "Can you see?"

In innocence and purity, my riddles set hearts free."

The playful dolphin leaped and laughed, "Guess what I am, if you dare!

In the ocean's depths, I find my joy, my riddles fill the air."

A majestic lion, with a mighty roar, challenged, "Who am I to you?"

In courage and strength, I stand tall, my riddles strong and true."

The graceful butterfly fluttered by, its colors like a dream,

"Can you decipher what I mean? In change, my riddles gleam."

The wise old turtle, slow and steady, said, "I have a tale to tell,

In patience and endurance, my riddles serve you well."

As the animals spoke their riddles, the world around them spun,

Each riddle a reflection of life, where mysteries were won.

In this world of enigmatic beasts, where answers hid in plain sight,

Life's secrets were unlocked through riddles, in the day and night.
