Early Life and Love for Music

David Bowie was born David Robert Jones on January 8, 1947, in London, England. As a child, he loved music and learned to play the saxophone. He was fascinated by rock and roll, and his biggest musical inspirations included Little Richard and Elvis Presley.

As a teenager, David wanted to stand out. He changed his name to David Bowie to avoid confusion with another singer named Davy Jones. He worked hard on his music, and by the late 1960s, he had released his first hit song, "Space Oddity".

Becoming a Star

In the 1970s, David Bowie became one of the biggest stars in rock music. He created a famous character named Ziggy Stardust, a space-themed rock star with bright-colored hair and futuristic outfits. His concerts were full of energy and creativity. His album The Rise and Fall of Ziggy Stardust and the Spiders from Mars made him a global superstar.

Bowie was always changing his style. He did not want to be like other musicians—he wanted to be different. In the 1980s, he had more hit songs, including "Let's Dance", "Heroes", and "Under Pressure" with the band Queen.
