

Name _____

The Essential Functions of Political Parties in a Democracy

Short Answer Key

1. Political parties select candidates for various elected positions based on alignment with the party's values and beliefs.
2. Political parties ensure oversight and accountability by scrutinizing the actions and decisions of the ruling party or government.
3. Political parties promote political engagement among citizens by organizing rallies, debates, and campaigns, as well as encouraging participation in civic activities.
4. Balancing competing interests and viewpoints within their ranks helps political parties present a unified platform and address diverse voter concerns.
5. An example of political parties adapting to changing societal needs is the inclusion of policies to address environmental issues, such as supporting renewable energy initiatives.

