

Name _____

Fashion Freedom: A Sonnet on Self-Expression

Short Answer Key

1. Fashion serves as a form of self-expression by allowing individuals to convey their inner choices, personalities, and identities through the clothes they wear.
2. The poem suggests that clothing is a means through which individuals can communicate their identity to the world, reflecting their unique tastes and preferences.
3. The line, "A canvas blank, we paint with threads and flair," implies that fashion provides a creative platform where individuals can express themselves through clothing choices.
4. The poem suggests that fashion is an integral part of self-expression because it allows people to communicate who they are, their values, and their personal style to the world.

