Buttons, Zippers, and Snaps: The Secrets of Fastening Clothes

Short Answer Key

1. Buttons may be used to add ornamental detail to a jacket or coat, like decorative buttons on the cuffs or front of a blazer.
2. Zippers have a sliding mechanism that allows for quick opening and closing of clothing, making it convenient to put on or take off garments like pants or jackets.
3. Snaps are often used in areas where a seamless look is desired, such as baby clothes, shirts, or dresses. They create a closure that is hidden beneath the fabric, preserving a clean and smooth appearance.
4. Clothing fasteners like buttons and zippers secure different parts of clothing together, ensuring that garments fit correctly and stay in position during movement. This prevents clothing from shifting or coming undone.
5. One modern innovation in clothing fasteners is velcro, which consists of two fabric strips with tiny hooks and loops that stick together when pressed, providing a secure and easy-to-use closure.
