Fear's Echo

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Students might suggest staying calm, listening to the guide, or avoiding the trip altogether.
2. Some may argue that Eckels' fear was natural because the T. rex was so frightening, while others might say he should have prepared better.
3. Students could discuss how fear can help people avoid danger but can also cause poor decisions when not managed.
4. Students should reflect on personal or observed experiences where fear led to a mistake, such as forgetting something during a test or hesitating in an important moment.
