

Name _____

From Fields to Factories: How the Industrial Revolution Led to Urbanization

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. The impact of urbanization on family dynamics varied but often involved children and parents working separately, which could lead to shifts in family roles and dynamics.
2. Advantages of urbanization included access to job opportunities and urban amenities, while disadvantages included overcrowding and poor living conditions.
3. Urbanization had long-term effects on societies, including continued industrialization, urban growth, and changes in lifestyle and values.
4. Labor movements played a crucial role in advocating for improved working conditions, shorter work hours, and better wages, contributing to the betterment of workers' lives.

