

Name _____

Indonesia's Unique Geography

Short Answer Key

1. One example of an active volcano in Indonesia is Mount Merapi, located on Java.
2. The Pacific Ring of Fire is significant in Indonesia because it results in high volcanic and seismic activity, including numerous active volcanoes and earthquakes.
3. The primary threat to Indonesia's rainforests and biodiversity is deforestation due to logging, agriculture, and palm oil production.
4. One popular marine activity that tourists can enjoy in Indonesia is scuba diving to explore vibrant coral reefs and marine life.
5. Coastal areas in Indonesia have a more humid tropical climate, while highland regions are cooler and often have a subtropical climate.

