

Name _____

The Journey of George and Lennie in 'Of Mice and Men'

Short Answer Key

1. George and Lennie's dream is to own a piece of land together, where they can be their own bosses and live in peace. It is important to them because it represents hope, freedom, and a better life.
2. Curley's wife's attempt to talk to the ranch workers, including Lennie, leads to the tragic incident where Lennie accidentally kills her while trying to keep her quiet.
3. The meeting place near the river is a symbol of their friendship and a safety net in case they ever get into trouble. It is a place where they can find each other if separated.
4. Slim's character serves as a wise and respected figure on the ranch. In the middle of the story, he influences the characters by mediating conflicts, providing guidance, and gaining their trust.
5. George's decision to shoot Lennie at the end of the story is emotionally devastating for him, as he had to sacrifice his friend to protect him from a more brutal fate.
