Growing Up: A Sonnet of Discovery

As childhood's days give way to teenage years,

We find that growing up brings joy and tears.

The world unfolds, revealing secrets vast,

With each new day, we learn from moments past.

We spread our wings, explore the great unknown,

In friendships deep, our true selves are shown.

Through trials and triumphs, we find our way,

And treasures of the heart in us hold sway.

We learn that dreams can take us to the skies,

And life's a journey full of sweet surprise.

With every step, we gain a clearer view,

Of who we are, of what we aim to do.

So, let us cherish youth's adventurous ride,

For in growing up, our spirits find their stride.
