The Great Homework Rebellion

Short Answer Key

1. Lily and Max started "The Great Homework Rebellion" because they were tired of piles of homework and bizarre school rules in Absurdistan.
2. Mayor Peculiarnose was the town's peculiar mayor with an unusual obsession with socks. He met with Lily and Max to negotiate a compromise regarding homework and tests.
3. The compromise they agreed to was that tests would be replaced with "Sock Puppet Theater," where students would perform sock puppet plays using their socks as characters.
4. "The Great Homework Rebellion" became a legend in Absurdistan because it celebrated absurdity, and the rules were rewritten by teenagers who refused to accept the status quo.
5. The story conveys that sometimes, challenging absurdity and rebelling against unreasonable rules can lead to positive change and celebration of individuality.
