

Name _____

Guardians of Rights: Enforcing and Monitoring International Human Rights Laws

Multiple Choice Questions

1. What are international human rights laws designed to safeguard?
 - a) National security
 - b) Fundamental rights and freedoms
 - c) Trade agreements
 - d) Military alliances

2. Which of the following is NOT a mechanism for enforcing international human rights laws?
 - a) Treaty Bodies
 - b) International Courts
 - c) National Courts
 - d) National Police Forces

3. What role do treaty bodies play in enforcing international human rights laws?
 - a) They conduct Universal Periodic Reviews (UPRs) of countries.
 - b) They adjudicate human rights cases at the national level.
 - c) They are independent experts who monitor violations.
 - d) They promote economic development.

4. How do national courts contribute to the enforcement of international human rights laws?
 - a) They engage in dialogue with governments.
 - b) They conduct Universal Periodic Reviews (UPRs).
 - c) They adjudicate cases involving human rights violations.
 - d) They raise awareness about human rights abuses.

5. Who are Special Rapporteurs, and what is their role in monitoring human rights?
 - a) They are national judges responsible for human rights cases.
 - b) They are diplomats representing countries at the UN.
 - c) They are independent experts appointed by the UN to investigate specific human rights issues and advocate for improvements.
 - d) They are leaders of civil society organizations.

