Peer Pressure: The Power of Influence

Short Answer Key

1. Example of direct peer pressure: When a friend directly tells you to try smoking.
2. Fear of rejection can influence decision-making by making you go along with things you're not comfortable with because you worry that your friends won't like you anymore.
3. Positive peer pressure is when your friends encourage you to make good choices. For example, they might encourage you to join a charity event to help others.
4. Personal experience or observation of peer pressure: [Student's personal response]
